4 to harmful descriptions or narrations and providing a penalty.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law prohibits a person from exposing a child to harmful material by selling, renting, exhibiting, transferring or loaning such material to a child. The types of material covered under current law are as follows: 1) any visual representation or image (such as a picture or drawing) of a person or portion of the human body that depicts nudity, sexually explicit conduct, sadomasochistic abuse, physical torture or brutality, or any printed matter (such as a book or magazine) that contains such a visual representation or image; and 2) any sound recording that contains explicit and detailed verbal descriptions or narrative accounts of sexual excitement, sexually explicit conduct, sadomasochistic abuse, physical torture or brutality. To be harmful to children, the material's descriptions or representations must: 1) predominantly appeal to the prurient, shameful or morbid interest of children; 2) be patently offensive to prevailing standards in the adult community as a whole with respect to what is suitable material for children; and 3) lack serious literary, artistic, political, scientific or educational value for children, when taken as a whole. A person who violates the prohibition against exposing a child to harmful material may be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than 2 years or both.

SENATE BILL 122

This bill prohibits a person from verbally communicating to a child an explicit and detailed description or narrative account of sexual excitement, sexually explicit conduct, sadomasochistic abuse, physical torture or brutality that, taken as a whole, is harmful to children. The communication to the child may be done by any means. A description or narrative account is harmful to children under the bill if it meets the same criteria used under current law for determining whether material is harmful to children. A person who violates the prohibition created in the bill may be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than 2 years or both.
